

CV - Jens D. Lundgren, MD, DMSc, Professor, Chief Physician, Director*Department of infectious Diseases, Rigshospitalet, University of Copenhagen*Born: Copenhagen, Denmark, 28 May 1960

Education and current employment: MD 1987 (University of Copenhagen), specialized in internal medicine, infectious diseases and tropical medicine; professor in infectious disease epidemiology and in viral diseases 2005 and 2007, resp. (University of Copenhagen). Since 1998 Director of CHIP, Centre for Health and Infectious Disease Research. Since 2015, center leader of National Research Foundation Center of Excellence PERSIMUNE.

Research achievements: Has 20+ years of expertise in leading large international research related to infectious complications in HIV+ persons and transplant recipients funded by the European Commission (EuroSIDA in EuroCoord), the European Medicines Agency (D:A:D) and NIH (INSIGHT studies). Lead of the European-funded networks and co-founder of the global infectious disease research network INSIGHT. Founded MATCH in 2010 to monitor viral infections in transplant patients at Rigshospitalet, now by a grant from the Danish National Research Foundation turned into a research platform across Rigshospitalet to identify factors predicting the risk of infectious complication in immune deficient patients.

Coordinating activities among 250+ international institutions documents his ability to manage large data mergers and perform hypotheses-driven and -generating research. Recent years he focused on establishing evidence for the optimal initiation of antiretroviral therapy in HIV infected patients, investigating non-AIDS defining malignancies and inflammation mediated organ disease, especially focused on kidney, liver and cardiovascular diseases; viral diseases in transplant recipients and the impact of changing mutations of influenza viruses in the global epidemic. His team is Global Centre of Excellence in Health and has status of 'Collaborative Centre for HIV and Viral Hepatitis' by the WHO.

Supervised 19 PhDs and 6 DMScs and has ongoing supervision for 11 PhDs and 4 DMScs.
